Behind the Polish Polemics — A Delicate Struggle for Power

By James M. Markham New York Times Service

WARTER AVER Section of the sectio

> WARSAW -- Behind the latest barrage of angry polemics and talk of confrontation between the Polish state and Solidarity, the independent trade union, a subtle struggle for decisive levers of power is being played out Having concluded last month an extraordinary congress that adopted novel democratic voting procedures; the leaders of Poland's Communist Party clearly feel that they possess a new mantle of legitimacy that should permit them to govern with firmess, and with the respect and understanding of the nation. But this redoubled determination, expressed more vigorously in words than in action, has collided with a fresh phase of mili-tancy in Solidarity, which will itself celebrate its first national congress in September. If the Communist Party displays a cer-tain post-electoral self-satisfaction. Solidarity is in a state of preconvention ferment.

Temporary Retreat

On Wednesday, in an important tactical move, Solidarity's national commission appealed to its restless local chapters to call off strikes and marches over food shortages, which some Poles feared were leading toward a violent showdown with the state, pressed from the wings by the Soviet Union to discipline the union movement.

But, at the same time, Solidarity's Gdansk-based leaders left no doubt that they considered this merciv a retreat on one minor front, and that they intended to wrest concessions from the state on the fundamental issues of control of the media, manage-ment of the economy and the democratization of parliament and, municipal councils.

The union's strategists and theoreticians start from the as-sumption that the Polish state and the Communist Party are in disarray. At an astonishingly frank leadership discussion in Gdansk at the end of July, which has just been published, Jacek Kuron, an adviser to the move-ment, pithily summed up this prevailing view. "The economic and political apparatus is falling apart, but there is no Solidarity [political] organization, so there is a vacu-um in society," he said. "This is a revolution in which the old order has been overthrown, but no new attempt has been made to create a new one. We have to know whether we want to reach for power as the trade union, as a party or whether we want to make some sort of new arrangement" lution as far as the Soviet Union's propaganda machine is concerned - emerges as something of a moderate, urging Solidarity to resist the temptation to organize a political party of its own or to demand free elections to the Sejm (parliament).

"Solidarity cannot organize a new system; it has to be organized by the whole society," insisted. "It's necessary to build a new organization which would govern, but it shouldn't be a party but instead the self-manage-ment movement, which should run the economy, an enterprise,

It is perhaps not surprising-that, reading the movement's bold plans for the future, Poland's beleagnered Communist authorities have accused Solidarity of overstepping its mandate as a trade union. The point man in this attack has been Deputy Premier Mieczyslaw Rakowski, a party liberal and once the leading advocate of forging a "part-nership" between the Communist authorities and the union.

In talks that collapsed in im-passe last week, Mr. Rakowski persistently accused Solidarity of undermining the state. "Food is political control." he retorted hotly when Solidarity demanded a supervisory role over Poland's chaotic distribution system. "Who controls food has political power." He charged the union with trying to create "two countries - a nominal country and a real country based ou Solidaritv.

Lech Walesa and other national Solidarity leaders never regarded the grass-roots protests over food shortages as leading to any specific political goals. Now they appear determined to focus on the central question of workers' management in industry. If Solidarity can achieve the goal (Continued on Page 2, Col. 1)

WARSAW --- Polish Communist Party leader Stanislaw Ka-Premier Wojciech nia and Jaruzelski will visit the Soviet Union soon and are expected to hold talks there with President Leonid I. Brezhnev.

The Soviet Union, meanwhile, said it would stage nine days of land and sea maneuvers close to Poland at the beginning of September. Polish radio said the Polish leaders would pay "a brief work-ing visit" to the Soviet Union but gave no details. They were expected, however, to meet with Mr. Brezhnev in his Crimean retreat. Mr. Kania will be the last of the Warsaw Pact leaders to visit Mr. Brezhnev in what has become an annual round of informal bilateral talks.

Gen. Jaruzelski's presence was seen as a departure from normal consultations. Diplomats said Mr. Brezhnev would want to see the Polish premier because his government has been closely involved in talks with the inde-pendent union Solidarity.

Continuing Maneuvers

The brief official Soviet announcement of the maneuvers said that they would be held from Sept. 4 through 12 and would be aimed at testing the co-ordination between the various armed forces. No other details were given.

Western military experts have said the Soviet Union is currently assembling one of the biggest flotillas of warships in the Baltic mats in Warsaw said the buildup was prohably linked to the maneuvers.

The Warsaw Pact has carried out a series of military exercises during the last few months, and mock operations involving East German and Polish units are now being conducted in southern East Germany. Tass said the exercises next month would involve only Soviet units.

Western experts have said that the unusually high level of mili-tary activity appeared to be d at keeping up pressure on both the government and the free trade unions in Poland by reminding them of the possibili ty of Soviet intervention. Diplo-mats in Poland said that the September maneuvers could be a continuation of that pattern.

Also Thursday, Poland's Communist Party welcomed an appeal hy the independent unions for a two-month moratorium on strikes and demonstrations over food shortages and a union call for miners and industrial workers to work for free for eight Saturdays in an effort to boost production. The party pa-per Trybuna Ludu said the call by the Solidarity leadership represented "a partial return to realistic thinking."

The party's response came as Solidarity prepared to celebrate Friday's first anniversary of a shipyard strike in Gdansk and the founding of the strike committee that went on to become Eastern Europe's first independent union.

Global Group Fails to Back U.S. Air Strike

AMSTERDAM - The International Federation of Air Traffic Controllers Associations decided

Thursday against calling for worldwide action to support strik-ing U.S. controllers. The federation's president, Har-ry Henschler, said that, in return for the international gesture, President Reagan should reopen negoti-ations with the U.S. Professional Air Traffic Controllers Organiza-tion (PATCO). Mr. Henschler called on other air controllers who are staging or planning job actions to call them off.

After three days of near havoc. transatlantic air service returned to almost normal Thursday. At air-ports across Europe, officials reported full service available and relatively modest delays resulting from the continuing U.S. strike. Mr. Henschler said after the federation's executive board ended a two-day meeting that the board would recommend postponing any international steps in support of the U.S. controllers at least until

Ang. 22. On that date, delegates of the 61 member organizations of the international federation will meet in Amsterdam "if required," accord-ing to a telegram the four members of the federation's executive board sent to Mr. Reagan.

"Your personal goodwill will help to bring the matter to a speedy, amicable solution and the federation urges that negotiations between both parties reopen im-mediately," the telegram said. "The matter can be solved within 48 hours given the goodwill required by both sides."

Negative Reaction

In Washington, an aide to Transportation Secretary Drew L. Lewis Jr. said that, despite the federation's action, the administration would not resume talks with PATCO.

"The president has remained resolute about his position and has not changed his position," spokeswoman Linda Gosden said, At London, Paris, Brussels, Rome, Frankfurt, Amsterdam and to encourage Israel and the PLO to recognize each other and negotiate their differences. Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr., however, repeated the standard conditions for dealing with the PLO and said this was "understood" by

Mr. Sadat. Many nongovernmental specialists on the Middle East are known to be sympathetic with the contention, as expressed by Mr. Brzezinski, that by dealing with the PLO the United States could moderate its policies and improve the chances for a lasting settlement. State Department officials have also warned that the animosity of Israel to the PLO could run the risk of an Israeli withdrawal from negotiations. Is-rael regards the PLO as a terrorist group.

Mr. Brzezinski said it was time to stop what he porters for his positions on various issues, but there is no record of his ever advocating direct contacts with the PLO. In fact, his best known remark about the group was made in an interview with Paris Match magazine following Mr. Sadat's up to Jerusalem in 1977.

He was quoted as saying that the refusal of the PLO to moderate its position mean: "Bye, Bye PLO" — that it no longer was crucial to Middle East diplomacy.

French Example

In justifying his position, Mr. Brzezinski said Wednesday that the United States "should not make the same mistake" that he said France had mac's in the 1950s when it refused to talk with the National Liberation Front of Algeria during the Algerian war of independence.

"Today we were lucky in that delays only averaged about 30 minutes," a spokesman for British Airways said Thursday. He said the airline, the largest internation-al carrier, operated all 11 of its scheduled flights to the Umted States and all three flights to Canada.

A spokesman for Pan American World Airways said that all nine Pan Am flights from London to the United States had operated, with delays ranging up to almost three hours.

Empty Seats

Pan Am and other lines reported some planes departing with empty seats. It appeared that some travelers were deferring trips that did not need to be made. In addition. the airlines surmised that a number of passengers were making multiple reservations to protect against possible cancellations. The flight zone "has opened up again and it is our feeling that we will be getting things back to nor-mal," said Gerald Fitzgerald, operations manager at New York's Kennedy Airport, the largest U.S. handler of international flights. Robert E. Poli, president of PATCO, called the action by the international controllers' federation "an effort of good faith" and said he still hoped that contract negotiations could resume. Mr. Poli said that the U.S. controllers have not lost their resolve, and be indicated that there could be a lengthy stalemate between the union and the government. In New York on Wednesday, Mr. Poli said he had never dis-cussed the walkout with foreign air controllers. When asked in a court appearence if he had ever discussed "job actions" with air controllers in other countries, he de-nied that he or any PATCO official - to his knowledge - had done so, or that the union had any plans for such discussions. Mr. Henschler said that Por-tuguese controllers had agreed to 20 K. Robe Pros. 5 Din 10 Din 5 Din 10 Din 5 Din 10 Din 5 Din

U.S. Energy Stance Focuses on Industry

The Associated Press NAIROBI -- The United States said Thursday that it will rely on private enterprise to develop and market new sources of energy.

The U.S. position, delivered at the first UN Conference on New and Renewable sources of Energy here, drew criticism from Democratic congressmen on the U.S. delegation and energy lobbyists at-tending the conference.

The position was delivered by Stanton D. Anderson, an interna-tional lawyer and counselor to President Reagan during the presidemial campaign. Mr. Anderson told the representatives of 140 countries: "We must guard against the replacement of crippling do-

pendence on imported hydrocarbons with an equally debilitating collection of subsidized and uneconomic new and renewable energy projects. "We believe that the solution ties in the long-term reliance on open energy markets in which in-genuity and enterprise can flour-ish," he said. "In the U.S. energy transition, private industry will play the major role."

New York Democrat and congres-sional adviser to the U.S. delegation, expressed the disagreement in a speech Thursday to a nongovernmental forum of the conference. "The marketplace cannot be relied on entirely to make the right decisions, to meet immediate global needs for the transition to a new energy future, or to provide adequate incentive to invest in research to develop these technologies," he said.

"The role of government is to fill the gaps the marketplace ig-nores, providing a stability which will ensure global opportunity for marketplace activity rather than poverty and revolution," he added. The U.S. delegation declared that it was "especially conscious of the energy needs of the developing countries" and announced a doubling of bilateral energy aid to more than $70 million in the next fiscal year. But this fell far short of the pledge by Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Tradeau of Canada to provide the equivalent of more than $1 billion in bilateral aid during the next five years for energy deongressmen Say U.S. Must Stem Flow of Indochinese Refugees through what one delegate called "humane deter-gees in the past by pushing the boats of new arrivals back out to sea. Thai government officials already have perceived a changing mood in the United States that they fear will lead to restrictions on U.S. resettlement, saddling Thailand with an increasing number of refugees In the past few months, therefore, Thailand has begun to take a tougher line to discourage Indo-chinese from leaving their homelands. Some refugee camps have been closed to new arrivals, and more than 400 Vietnamese who fled their country overland have been refused permission to leave the volatile Thai-Cambodian border area for safer camps.

Refugee Quotas

In addition, Thai officials have warned that after Aug. 15, arriving Vietnamese boat people would be ineligible for resettlement abroad and would be put in detention camps until they were ready to return home.

The visiting congressmen could offer no alternative to resettlement for Vietnamese who fiee their country, but they stressed that a way must be found to discourage them from leaving in the first place,

The chairman of the delegation, Rep. George E. Danielson, Democrat of California, said existing U.S. law "defines a refugee in an inadequate man-ner, and we have to straighten this out." He said his constituents were "concerned, even alarmed" about the influx of refugees and that something must be done to "cut off the flow."

Rep. Danielson, chairman of a subcommittee on administrative law and governmental relations, predicted that "the refugee law will be worked over" and that the government's program "will be reviewed." He added that he would recommend the removal of refugee quotas entirely because they constitute a pull factor, a magnet for refugees."

The quota for Indochinese refugees currently provides for admission of 168,000 during fiscal 1981, which ends in September.

Rep. Romano L. Mazzoli, a Kentucky Democrat who is chairman of the key subcommittee on immigration, refugees and international law, said congressmen would no longer simply accept the administration's figures on the number of refugees to be admitted. He said consultations with the administranon on the matter would be much more detailed this year.

Rep. Mazzoli declined to oredict how much refugee admissions might be cut, but said that any reductions could be gradual. He acknowledged that such measures might lead to "fundamental changes" in the policies of Southeast Asian countries.

Reflecting the tougher mood, Rep. Sam B. Hall, Democrat of Texas, said that during the delegation's fact-finding tour of refugee camps, "we found evidence of people who do not fit the refugee definition.

Rep. Hall added: "There must be a day of reckoning. The United States can't serve as a depository for every person in the world who wishes to leave his country. Word must be sent back that the United States is getting ready to draw the line."

New York Times Service MANAGUA --- In the first highlevel talks between the Reagan ad-ministration and Nicaragua's revolutionary government, the United States has said that any improvement in relations and resumption of economic aid depends upon a change of Nicaragua's policies in Central America. Thomas O. Enders, the assistant secretary of state for inter-American affairs, was reported to have told Nicaragua's ruling junta and Sandinista commanders that the main obstacles to an improvement in relations were signs of continuing arms shipments to Salvadoran guerrillas and Nicaragua's own arms huildup, which he said was alarming other Central American nations.

In response, Nicaraguan officials were said to have denied that they were supplying weapons to the Salvadoran left and justified their acquisition of new armamenus, including about two dozen Soviet-made T-55 tanks, hy pointing to increased U.S. arms sales to the army-hacked regimes in nearby El Salvador. Wheat sales under the so-called PL-480 program as well as all economic aid were suspended by the Reagan administration this year in reprisal for what was charged were Nicaraguan arms shipments to the Salva-doran guerrillas.

Since then, while recognizing publicly that the arms flow to El Salvador from Nicaragua has been reduced to a trickle, U.S. officials have expressed growing concern at the expansion of the Sandinista army. Nicaragua is also said to have received a large number of automatic weapons, surface-to-air missiles and tanks from Sovietbloc nations.

In turn, Nicaraguan officials have pointed to U.S. tolerance of training camps for rightist Nicara-guan exiles in Florida as evidence that the Reagan administration is seeking to destabilize the 12month-old revolution. In recent months, there have also been regular attacks on Sandinista outposts by Nicaraguan excles operating freely from Honduran territory with the apparent collusion of rightist sectors of the Honduran Army.

After personally delivering the petition to Board of Prison Terms Chairman Raymond C. Brown,

Mr. Van de Kamp appealed for public support of his effort to block Sinhan's parole. Holding press conferences in the state capital and in Los Angeles, Mr. Van de Kamp called for a public letter-writing campaign to let the parole board and Gov. Edmand G. Brown Jr. know of opposition to Sirhan's release, scheduled for Sept. 1, 1984.

The essence of the petition was that the killing of former Sen. Robert F. Kennedy during his 1968 presidential campaign in Cal-ifornia was "different" from other murders because it was a political assassination.

Weakness' in the System

"Sirhan is a political assessin. His murder of Sen. Kennedy was an act intended to kill more than a man or woman. It was different. It was an act intended to kill a living and vital part of our democratic and representative government,"

• A $75,000 exclusion for income cained in 1982, rising to $80,000 in 1983, $85,000 in 1984, $90,000 in 1985, and $95,000 in 1986. Deductions the district attorney said. This would allow Americans was killed.

"Should Sirhan be released as scheduled, it will be yet another sign of weakness in our criminal justice system," Mr. Van de Kamp said. "We will risk sending out un-desirable messages to the effect that political assassination in Cali-fornia costs only 16 years."

J.S. government salary increases, the base housing cost would increase. Jousing costs include expenses attributable to housing, such as utilities ind insurance, but not taxes and interest. Trial Set for Officer In Titan Missile Case New York Times Service Force reneged on its agreement to WASHINGTON - The U.S. Air Force has announced that it would convene a general courtmartial in the case of 2nd LL Christopher M. Cooke, the Titan missile officer accused of passing sensitive data to the Soviet Unton's Embassy.

An Air Force spokesman said Wednesday that Lt. Cooke, 25, would be tried on charges of having violated Air Force regulations on three occasions by passing clas-sified information to the Soviet Union and on 11 more occasions by failing to report contacts with Russians. The maximum penalty if convicted of the first group of charges is 10 years in prison at hard labor, forfeture of all pay and allowanc-es and discharge from the Air Force. The maximum penalty if convicted of the second group is two years at hard labor, and the pay and discharge provisions. The decision to go ahead with the court-martial came after a formal investigation into the charges that LL Cooke, the deputy commander of a Titan missile crew in Kansas, made the unauthorized visits to the Soviet Embassy here. The Air Force had announced previously that Lt. Cooke told investigators he had passed sensitive data concerning the missiles to Soviet diplomats on visits to the embassy between December, 1980, and May, 1981.

Immunity Claimed

Shortly after his arrest last May 29, the lieutenant was described by his military attorney, Capt. Francis W. Pedrotty, as cooperating fully with the Air Force investigation under promise of complete immunity. Capt. Pedrotty could not be reached for comment Wednesday night, nor could Lt. Cooke's civilian lawyer, F. Lee Bailey.

· A two-carner couple files a joint return, with the gross income of ne spouse at $100,000 and the other at $50,000. Each would be allowed $75,000 exclusion, but it is the intent of Congress that these not be ooled. In this case one spouse would have $25,000 left after the exclu-on and the other would have nothing. Their joint income would be 25,000 from which they would subtract their housing exclusion and deulate their tax. To illustrate how the new law would work in a country without an come tax, consider:

· A married taxpayer with two children who gets a salary of $40,000, bonus of $15,000, a cost of living allowance of $15,000, a housing lowance of $52,000, an education allowance of $4,000, and a home twe allowance of $6,000. Adding these figures puts his gross income at 122,000 132.000.

From this be subtracts his income exclusion, leaving $57,000 ($132,000 ss $75,000). He finds his housing exclusion ($52,000 less $6,059 or 45,941) and subtracts that from the $57,000, leaving a taxable income i $11,059. The U.S. tax on $11,059 is $546 and since be has paid no

This wife and dependents because of adverse conditions where he forked, the total cost of the second home would be excludable. If he gets a additional housing allowance of $40,000, his gross income would be 172,000 ($40,000 + $15,000 + $15,000 + $52,000 $40,000 + $4,000 5,000) 5,000).

food sbortages, is expecting a disastrous bar-vest and has 85,000 troops bogged down in There is another memorable date coming up next week, though, and Moscow and its more loyal satellites have been making frequent and sinister references to it. Aug. 20 will be the 13th anniversary of the Warsaw Pact invasion of Czechoslovakia that put an end to the Prague Spring, as the Czecboslo-vak experiment with liberalism was widely known. The references have come in the form of crude threats to the Poles. And with few exceptions, most recent mentions of Czecboslovakia in the Western press bave been reports on those East Bloc references to an invasion of Poland.

One exception, though, was the sentencing last month of Rudolf Battek to seven and a half years in prison and three years of internal exile for acts permitted under the International Covenant on Political and Civil Rights and the Helsinki Final Act, both of which have been ratified by Prague. NEW YORK — Like a wise old Indian chief. Anwar Sadat makes powerful medicine. Just lis-tening to him talk out his prescrip-tinn for peace in the Middle East at a luncheon meeting of the Council on Fnreign Relacions here the other day, yon had to believe. You had to think that, ves. somehow, it could work out his way. Part of it, af course, is the contagion of his intense commi-ment, the disarming cander, the

The force of Mr. Sadar's personality, then, has much to do with his self-evident hold on U.S. awhile articles and hold on U.S. public opinion - and on those who claim to shape it.

Force of Argument

But the force of Mr. Sadat's argument, and his example, has much to do with it as well. The spell may pass. But my bunch is that one way or another the man who had the vision and daring to change his own policy radically — to make the big breakthrough in Jerusalem — may wind np working some sort of wonders on President

Reagan's policy. The Palestine Liberation Organization's ultimate inclusion in the peace process could be for Mr. Reagan, in a sense, what the China opening was for Richard Nixon — one of those unthinkable aboutfaces that Republican presidents, more so than Democratic presidents, seem uniquely able to execute

This is not to suggest that Mr. Reagan will do what Mr. Sadat was publicly requesting in Wash-ington: abandon the commitment to Israel "which prevents the United States from contacting the PLO." Mr. Sadat knows the do-mestic political forces, not to men-ulon the Mr. Reagan's convictions,

Hello, Moscow

Slowly, Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. is finding his voice and using it, firmly but respectfully, to address the Soviet Union. After the belligerence of the early Reagan days, that is progress.

It should not be news in the nuclear era that the United States, while competing with Moscow to protect freedom, "must also search for cooperation to protect mankind." But that was not this administration's tendency until Mr. Haig began sketching his vision of détente. He is at pains now to prove that contacts with Moscow bave not been neglected. That Washington no longer regards communication as a mark of weakness is also progress.

Some of Mr. Haig's propositions remain dismayingly vague; what he says is mostly sound but what be doesn't say may hide a busbel of contradictions. Perbaps even now be is not so much negotiating with the Kremlin as bargaining for negotiating room inside But be is on the righ punisb them by pursuing military superiority. But that is a mirage; there is an immutable parity in strategic weapons and it argues for arms control. It can be a negotiated parity at reduced levels or uncontrolled parity at much costlier levels. Whatever happens in Afghanistan, it will not alter the logic of SALT.

Fortunately, arms control is not the only reward" Mr. Haig would offer for détente. He also bolds out trade and technology and "diplomatic alternatives to the pursuit of violent change."

But as be also recognizes. Soviet exploita-tion of change is not the same as Soviet instigation of every crisis. And as be should bave added, counterforce and bribery will not contain Soviet influence everywhere. The aspirations of other societies and the skill of American diplomacy also count. If the United States misbandles regional problems -- the Palestinians in the Middle East or the Sanustas in Central America track and should be encouraged to produce details that support his principles. Mr. Haig's major message to Moscow this week began with an unemotional list of complaints to which most Americans subscribe. The Soviet arms buildup, particularly in Europe, has been excessive; it needs to be either matched or reversed by agreement. The Soviet invasion of Afghanistan, support for Viet-nam's invasion of Cambodia and use of Cuban troops in Africa are all dangerous resorts to force. No stable relationship is possible if that is to be the Soviet way.

strengthens Soviet opportunity.

So Mr. Haig bas only begun to define a policy. When be asks Moscow to "respect international norms of behavior" as the price of détente, be invites a sweeping negotiation about ground rules that the United States, too, would have to observe. No Afghanistans, to be sure. But overseas bases? Arms sales? Military advisory teams? Do the administration's "conceptual studies" for arms control extend to these difficult realms?

Henry Kissinger's "code of conduct" for the superpowers turned to rubber the moment it was announced in Moscow a decade ago. But such a code is what both sides need if they really mean to reduce confrontation and improve relations. And for that, they will have to talk, soon and often.

THE NEW YORK TIMES.

That 'Energy Policy'

Among its other less wordy duties, the executive branch of the U.S. government is supposed to deliver to Congress every two years something called a "national energy policy plan." Accordingly, the administra-tion last week released its first official pronouncement under this requirement. It did so with palpable reluctance - not out of a desire to hide anything, but because of a conviction that the country will be better off without a federal energy policy of the sort contemplated by the mandating law.

In fact, the Reagan national energy policy plan is neither a plan nor a policy, hut rather a statement of philosopby. The approach is clear: The best energy policy is the sum of all energy decisions made by all Americans with "a maximum of personal understanding and a minimum of governmental restraints.

This is, to be sure, Mr. Reagan's wellknown stand. It has to be said, however, that it ignores the national interests in energy that transcend the marketplace, not least the many ways energy use affects national security and foreign policy. But where it primarily hreaks down is in the inconsistent application to real energy decisions.

For instance, the document, ignoring its own guidelines, justifies official support for technologies the administration likes and removes them from those it doesn't. It condemns certain government intrusions into the marketplace --- the proposed bank to help finance energy conservation improvements, for instance - while ignoring others, such as the tax breaks that belp finance oil and gas exploration.

The administration is surely right in claiming that past plans, with their beavy reliance on detailed projections of energy use and demand, have frequently been out of date al-most as soon as they were printed. Still, a roughly consistent energy policy has at least some importance as a basis for private investment, as a guide for government action and for reasons of foreign policy. In all these respects, this effort falls short.

NEW YORK - The conflict between the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company and passengers refusing to pay more than 5 cents fare to Coney Island reached the proportions of a riot yesterday. Hundreds were dragged off the cars forcibly by the company's special policemen, and the disorder caused such a "tie-up" of traffic that thousands of men, women and childern had to walk twn miles or more to Coney Island. Similar scenes took place today and city officials promptly acted, the police commissioner revoking the licenses of the company's policemen and nrdering the police to preserve order. The acting mayor, warned the public that their remedy against the company was in suits for damages.

Fifty Years Ago August 14, 1931

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. - Adoption of a fiveday week and sbartening af the working day to six hours, as a means of combating the prevalent unemployment was advocated today by the ex-ecutive council of the American Federation of Labor, now in sessinn here. The council in its study of the situation determined to put directly to President Hoover the question of calling a conference of industry and labor to "meet the national emergency." The conference, it was urged, should be immediately called. As secondary measures of relief, the council declared "work security" should be established, and wherever possible, maintenance of a standard rate of pay.

No Distinction

This means that numerous key industries are now dominated by a handful of buge firms, and modern microeconomics makes no real disunction between the monopoly of one firm and the tacit agreement or oligopoly of the few. Conserva-tive economists, citing the same figures and accepting the same basic theory, have concluded that things are not quite so bad. But nn one, or almost no nne, in the free enterprise tradition has applauded the trend.

Though showing an exemplary caucon in citing him as a source, most economists, regardless of faith, would agree with Marx that concentration is an inherently adverse tendency of the system, departing only from his proclaimed pleasure in the result. With less concern far the association, they would agree with Mr. Friedman that monopoly (and oligopoly), the end products of the concentration, are the greatest danger to the con-sumer, which is to say the public at large. From Marx to Friedman one cannot have a greater span of agreement than that.

Simons' Disciples

Generations of conservative economists at the University of Chicago and elsewhere were edu-cated by the late Henry Simons and his brilliant and uncompro-mising tract, "A Positive Program for Laissez-faire," to the belief that a vigilani government and citizen-ry could defend competition and the market against monopoly and the ultimate debacle.

Mr. Simons' students, those of the revered Frank H. Knight, his colleague, and those in further descent therefrom made the compel-tive market a totem; indeed, no totemic symbol ever so marked a tribe. Coming th the present, these are the men whn are now prominent in public position or moral suasion in the Reagan administration. From none elsewhere in the world could nne expect a more powerful defense of competition

And this assault - this merger and takeover frenzy as it is being called - is occurring with the evideot approval of the very administration on which the bopes of the defenders of the market and the entrepreneur were centered. The New York Times a few days

It cited the more forthright statement of Attorney General William French Smith that "bigness in business is not necessarily badness." That bigness - corporate funds? concentration — is had was, he im-plied, one of the "misguided and mistaken concepts" he was committed to rooting out.

That the administration is indifferent to the predictions of Karl Marx is, perhaps, not surprising. One does not get the feeling that be is currently a presence in the Department of Justice or the White House mess. For some years there has been a liberal convocation, one to which I belong, that has beld that the large bureaucratic corporation is inevitable, that the antitrust laws are a weak reed, that some form of public control will eventually supplement the market and that lemon Socialism - public rescue operations as in the case of the Eastern railroads, Lockheed, Chrysler and, any time now. Pan Am - will make an increasing number of firms either temporary or permanent wards of the state. But we are not the constituency to which the administration, in its acceptance of the merg-er mania, turns naturally for sup-POR.

So one returns to its own constituency, which is the men and some women who profess to be serious about the market. Where in heavabout the market, where in heav-en's name are they? Some no doubt are saying that concentra-tion is not yet all that serious. That is to say that the patient, though admittedly afflicted, need not be treated. One should always wait until the disease is mortal. Not a good defense

By Linda Greenhouse New York Times Service

NEW ORLEANS -- The Amerian Bar Association, faced with a lawsuit that could threaten its dominant role in supervising law schools in the United States, has changed its rules to permit accreditation of a law school that requires. its students and faculty to pledge adherence to the school's religious precepts.

The American Bar Association's policy-making House of Delegates amended a standard for accrediting law schools to permit a school "having a religious affiliation and purpose" to select its students and faculty on the basis of religious be-lief. The vote was 147 to 127. The debate, in which leading members of the bar took opposit sides, held the often rowdy House of Delegates in rapt attention for nearly two hours.

The former standard prohibited discrimination on the basis of race, sex or religion. It made no special provision for religiously, affiliated law schools.

School Required Oath

As a result, an association com-mittee refused in May to accredit the law school of Oral Roberts University in Tolsa, Okla. The fundamentalist Christian law school, established two years ago, requires students to sign an oath of relig-ious faith and also requires faculty members to be among the faithful. The law school such the associa-

George Brooks of the National League of Families, an organization set up in 1970 to find Americans missing in action, said he acted as an intermediary in handing over the remains, which were to be sent to Hawaii Saturday for identification.

It was the second time in a month that remains had been for-warded to U.S. officials bere through civilian intermediaries after reportedly being recovered by anti-Communist guerrillas in Laos.

A federal district judge in Chicago issued a prelimi-nary ruling in favor of the law school but suspended the proceedings to give the House of Delegates a chance to act. After changing the standard on Wednesday, the delegates voted to give the law school novisional accreditation. Presumably that will make the lawsuit THOO

As the debate -indicated, the question is extremely sensitive. Most states make graduation from a law school accredited by the American Bar Association a prero-quisite for practicing law in the state. That gives the private organization immense quasi-govern-mental power over legal education It is a power, some lawyers believe, vulnerable to challenge on broader grounds than the religious issue,

'A Deep Guby'

Whitney North Seymour Sr., a former bar association president, came closest to expressing that view Wednesday as he urged dele-gates to approve the new standard. "It may be necessary to take a deep gulp," he said, "and accept things we might not wish to accept in order to preserve the pole of the in order to preserve the role of the ABA in approving law schools."

Ford Views 1981 as Turnaround Year New York Thmey Service

NEW YORK - Donald E. Petersen, president of Ford, says 1981 marked a turnaround for Ford and the company will strengthen its earn-ings performance in 1982. For the second quarter ended June 30, the auto maker earned $60 million, or 50 cents a share, on sales of $11.2 billion, its first profit in six consecutive gnarters.

In a statement released in New York, reporting remarks made at a Dallas car and truck show, Mr. Petersen specifically expressed confidence in the sales potential of Ford's new Escort four-door hatchback.

He said the Escort has been the industry's best-selling car since April 1, despite limited plant capacity for engine production that restrained sales. He said that Ford had added a second engine production line for Prices were mixed in moderate trading of American Stock Exchange issues.

Analysts said there was no major news to motivate the market and noted that the bond market was also directionless. Traders were startled late Wednesday when the government reported retail sales rose a surprisingly strong 1.3 percent in July. That report indicated the economy was not cooling off enough to drive interest rates lower.

Short-term interest rates shot up as a result of that report and di-minished investors' hopes that the Federal Reserve would case its tight credit policies.

Japan Selling 'Big' Cars in U.S. By Robert Ricci

Reuters

LOS ANGELES - Japan appears to be making progress in the luxury segment of the U.S. car market, an area long dominated by Detroil and West European manufacturers.

The move comes at a time when Detroit is making only one small, prestige, fuel-efficient luxury car - GM's Cimarron, made by the Cadillac Division

Industry analysis say Detroit has been so preoccupied with blumting sales of Japanese economy cars that it is almost oblivions to the sharp sales rise of Japanese models costing between $10,000 and $15,000.

Analysts also believe Japan may be poised to enter the super-luxury (above $15,000) market here.

The Japanese drive in luxury cars is just begin-ning, led by Toyota and Nissan, and will be inten-sified by the new restrictions on their imports, the analysts said.

Those restrictions, agreed to earlier this year, are forcing the Japanese into the lucrative luxury segment of the U.S. market, in part to preserve profit margins, the analysis added.

Wall Street analysis who follow the industry said the Japanese can build any car at substantial-ly lower cost than their U.S. counterparts.

Big Increase

"By offering more luxurious, expensive cars, by oncents more normality increase competition for the more profitable, higher value-added mod-els," said Harvey Heinbach, who follows the auto industry for Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner and Smith

Evidence of the growing Japanese success comes from sales of two luxury models, Toyota Cressida and Nissan Maxima, which rose 162 percent in the first half of 1981 over the same period last year, In the past year, the Japanese share of the U.S.

market for medium-priced luxury cars has risen to

J.D. Power and Associates, a California auto industry consulting firm, said Detroit and Western Europe should be concerned about the Japanese luxury car penetration.

But Mr. Power said that so far, the $13,000 Cressida and the $11,000 Maxima are probably more threatening to U.S. car makers than to those in Europe.

U.S. manufacturers will bave no small, high-mileage, status car to add to the Cimarron to conpete against imports for the next few years, Mr. Power added. There are many European models on the market. Although GM has been the carmaker the Japanese fear most, even the Cimarron may not be immune to encroachment from Toyota and Nissan, Mr. Power said.

The Cimarron is being produced and sold at a rate of about 1,100 a week, but Mr. Power said he thinks the car, which is a radical departure from the traditional ornate Cadillac style and size, may not succeed in the long run. Mr. Power said the Cimarron drew negative comments from more than half of 237 customers surveyed in 40 cines, had limited appeal for tradi-Cadillac owners and left Americans who have bought foreign imports "not overly im-

Cadillac officials disputed Mr. Power's survey, saying their own study of 1,100 shoppers in 15 cities was "very positive."

One analyst said he expects the Cimarron to improve in styling and performance in the next two years. Cadillac admits the car was somewhat hastily put together in response to a drastic sales drop in big luxury cars.

U.S. Again Debates Oil Exports to Japan

New York Times Service EW YORK - One of the more ter energy debates of the past

At the same time, however, ade - whether to allow the ext of Alaskan oil to Japan - is in being heard in Congress and roponents contend that exports Alaskan crude would result in aper oil prices for many U.S. asumers, who instead could zerve oil from Mexico, which

Of total Alaskan production of about 1.5 million barrels daily, 650,000 barrels are shipped through the Panama Canal or around South America to refineries on the Gulf Coast. The remaining 850,000 barrels daily go to refiners on the West Coast.

Gearing Up

Oil company critics, already an-gered by President Reagan's decision in January to remove oil price controls and by Congress's recent approval of large tax concessions to oil producers and royalty owners, are thus gearing up to fight the possible release of oil for the Japanese market.

In addition to discussions in the White House, the Cabinet Council on Natural Resources and Environment, led by Interior Sec-retary James G. Watt, is said to have debated Alaskan oil exports on several occasions. A White House spokesman said no final decision had been reached.

Senator Ted Stevens, an Alaska Republican who has long favored exports of his state's oil, reports the White House has promised its "active support."

'Meaningful Consideration'

"It's under much more meaningful consideration than ever before," said a Washington representative of one major oil compaoy. "First and foremost, it's the economically efficient thing to do.

Proponents of permitting the Alaskan oil exports say any oil exported to Japan could be replaced. with equal amounts of imports from Mexico or elsewhere. Indeed, Rep. Jones's bill would require Japan to make other oil available. most likely by trading Alaskan supplies for oil that Japan has con-tracted to buy from Mexico.

The Department of Energy has said that Mexican crude would cost $2 a barrel less to ship to the Guif Coast and that the federal government could reap an additional $510 million a year in "windfall profit" taxes from companies that produce oil in Alaska if the exports were permitted.

Economists and political analysts suggest this extra tax revenue may be a key consideration at the White House, which remains eager to balance the budget after shepherding its reduction in tax rates through Congress.

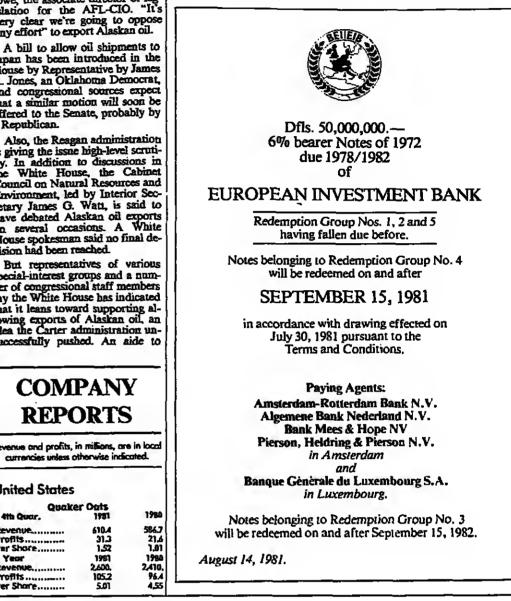

But political opposition seems certain

Japan Refuses to Take Oil From Iran, Kuwait

Renteri

TOKYO --- Japanese importers are refusing to accept contracted crude oil from Iran and Kuwait to press their demand for oil price caus, industry sources here said Thursday.

They have been asking Iran, from which Japan gets about 230,000 barrels a day, to lower its oil prices by $4 to $5 a barrel from the present level of $36 and $37 a barrel, the sources said. The Japanese buyers also are demanding that Kuwait stop charging premiums of about $6 a barrel and reum premiums Japan paid in ad-vance. Kuwait sells about 135,000 barrels a day to Japan.

BRIDGE

II ALF a century ago, for the first and last time, a bridge book headed the list of nonfiction best sellers. It was Ely Culbertson's "Blue Book" on bidding, and right from its initial appearance in 1930 it was in constant demand, going through 85 printings in two years,

The author, understandably proud of this performance, claimed in the third edition in 1933 that his "scientific principles . . . were true in 1923, must necessarily be true in 1933, and will be true in 1943."

The 1923' reference is odd, for at that date occasional experiments with the contract idea had not brought about Vanderbilt's famous codifica-tion and Calbertson was still playing auction bridge. But it is more interest-ing to consider the extent to which his prediction held true ing to consider the extent to winch his prediction held true. A cornerstone of Culbertson theory was the "Rule of Eight." One might think this an attempt to stress the im-portance of having eight or more trumps in the combined hands, but this valuable advice was not given to his multitude of readers. Instead, they were told that using his complex were told that, using his complex method of valuation, about eight tricks in every deal were taken by high cards, and that there were about eight honor-tricks in the deck. But numbers were far from exact and led users of the system into a morass. By 1943, honor-tricks were on the way out and point-count, advocated by many of Calbertson's unsuccessful rivals, was on the way in. Much of the specific bidding advice reads oddly today. His 2½ honor-trick standard for opening bids caused him to accept this hand as a bid of one heart heart:

As this led to trouble, he mied un-successfully to introduce the "part-forcing" one-over-one, allowing the player who has opened such a hand to pass a response of one spade. Passing a response of two clubs or two dia-monds was normal: To ensure a rebid, the responder had to jump to the three-leved. Some Culbertson ideas made no headway in the United States — and were soon abandoned by him — but caught on in England. One was the use of the jump raise or the jump re-sponse to two no-trump as an invita-had the last laugh on one count, or would have if he had lived long enough, for the invitational jump raise came back across the Atlantic 30 years later to become part of standard expert bidding. expert bidding. Another Cultorison idea, stul fa-vored in England, was the variable no-trump, strong when vulnerable, weak when not vulnerable. But his method of responding to one no-trump, before the days of the Stayman convestor was unsatisfactory, and he and his lolowers hardly ever opened in this way.

That's something the big player has to learn to live with."

Under the duress of chasing a .400 batting average last year, Brett started to show signs of curdling and turning sour. For all his prankish, hell-raising charm, the outwardly easygoing Brett has his family's temper and occasional mean streak.

His winter offseason was a whirlwind - 12 cities in 18 days at one point - that offered little respite. In spring training, his he-morrhoid problem recurred, forcing surgery and generally weaken-

NEW YORK — The papers say the American sunmach ulcer is becoming an endangered spe-cies. The incidence of ulcers, both peptic and duodenal, has declined sn natably in recent years that doctors can no longer assemble ennugh patients to abtain significant data about causes and treatment.

nften faked it. President Truman nnce destraved a critic with the sneer that he held only a threeulcer job. The more ulcerated your gastraintestinal organs. the more respect you deserved. Among the male elders in my family, there was living competition about who could validly claim the worst could validly claim the warst ulcers, and despite the atherwise excessively good table manners which were enforced in our bousebold, thunderous and indecorous belehing was justified on grnund that it indicated an bonorably parlous state of stnmacb ulceration.

In recent years, beart attack has replaced the stomacb ulcer as the medical badge of the overworked male. Except that it eliminates helching as a fnrm of social boasting, this strikes me as a definite step backward.

The stomach ulcer is not the only medical problem in decline. Acute appendicitis, once almost as common as athlete's foot, appears to bave become a rare affliction. Thirty years ago or so, every other boy in the locker room flaunted an appendectomy scar oo his abdo-

i recall the family doctor, after two or three visits to treat me far the greeo-apple agonies, announe-ing, "If this happens again, we'll take him in and have that appendix out." After that, I kept mum about stomach cramps and avoided the knife.

ment was "gall bladder." Someone was always headed far the opera-ting table for "gall bladder." I took it for granted that are af the miseries in which middle age doomed the female sex was gallbladder surgery. In the past 15 or 20 years, however, 1 can't recall meeting nr hearing nf a single wnman who was having her gall bladder excised.

Could this be because surgeons have become so fascinated with their marvelous new operations that they have nn interest in such sophnmaric stuff as appendix and gall-bladder removal except in the most critical cases?

Another medical problem that seems to be on the wane is broken arm. In my boyhood, it was hard to assemble nine boys for baseball without having at least one with an arm in a cast supported by an over-the-shoulder sing. When was the last time you saw a boy with his arm in a sline?

Part of the explanation may be that new bone-setting techniques have eliminated the cast and sling, but part also, I suspect, is that boys no longer climb things like trees, eliffs and buildings for amusemeot. In my observation, admittedly limited tn New York, gunshot wound is a far more common ailment of modern boyhood than broken arm.

This may also help explain the almost total disappearance of black eye. At one time, a boy wbo reached the age of courtship withnut ever having had a black eye would have been ruled off the course of romance oo grounds that be had not yet undergone the rites of manhood. Nowadays, you can travel among hordes for months without ever seeing a young man sporting a shiner.

I assume this does oot indicate a decline in the nation's virility level. but only a change in the ways in which youth expresses its exuberance, Very likely, I suspect, the doesn't bave a black eve is that be has a handsomely patched stab wound concealed by his shirt.

But let us not think on in this unhappy vein. It was bad enough in the old days when such thoughts could give you an ulcer. Now they could lead to a heart attack. Such is medical progress.

Poetry and Psychiatry

Therapist Uses e.e.cummings as Guide to Mind

By Richard Severo New York Times Service NEW YORK - Literate people have al-ways turned to poetry for truth. David Forrest turns in it for psychiatric truth. In particular, he has made an alliance with the poetry of e.e. cummings.

With the poer's verses at his side, Farrest, a New York psychiatrist, says he is better able to understand the conflicts that he within unubled minds.

"The idea that psychiatrists ought to read nnvels is not new or surprising," he said, "but the concept of poetry is not quite so understood because psychiatrists have not adequately studied language and its impor-tance in understanding defense mechanisms.

"Cummings deals with some of the most powerful questions in psychoanalysis. His power as a rhetorician is such that he goes to the limits of expression — the thoughts that 'lie too deep for tears,'" Forrest said, quoting Wordsworth.

Professional uses aside. Dr. Forrest feels that e.e. cummings -- the poet had his name legally changed in all lowercase letters -might be something of a psychopoetic guide for anyone who likes poetry, a guide to pene-urating the hierarchy of defense mechanisms that people use to help themselves deal with the spectrum of existence — such devices as bumor, sublimation, denial and rationalization, which enable people to deal with the pain of life, death, love, hate, inneliness, aggression.

Dealing With Death

Nowhere was the poet more effective than in the way he dealt with death. He eroticized it, laughed at it, insulted it, feared it, and ultimately accepted it, as he must. In one poem cited by Forrest, he managed to make the distingtion between dying, which he saw as a form of nature, and death itself, which be saw as "evil & legal." Cummings also used humor to deal with death, as in his poem about old mr. lyman, the farmer who finally succeeded, after dying, in raising a worm farm. Or in this one about death of a different sort:

My uncle Ed that's dead from the neck up is led all over Brattle Street by a castrated pup.

Forrest's credentials to evaluate e.e. cummings' poetry are as formidable as his medical credentials. He has been reading and studying poetry, emphasizing the works of cumm-ings, since his undergraduate days more than 20 years ago at Princeton, where he graduated summa cum laude as an English major. He attributes his academic distinction to the fact that cummings personally advised him on his sening thesis. Since then, he has written many scholarly papers on the works of cummings and is working with two cummings scholars, Nor-man Friedman and Richard S. Kennedy, in of the society's journal. Forrest does not prescribe poetry for his patients, mostly because interpretations of poems are so subjective. But if a patient evinces an interest in the writing or reading nf poetry, Forrest is interested, since it may of cummings' poems and in his endless ex-perimentation with spacing, capitalization, word division, and punctuation, he created striking parallels with the schizophrenie writing that psychiatrists see all the time. And, like schizophrenics, the quite normal cummings was adept at neologisms, the fabrica-tion of new words, evident in this poem against science and technology:

pity this busy monster, manunkind, into a mountainrange; lenses extend returns on its unself.

was not as arbitrary as some readers believe, said Forrest, who notes that the poet, despite the legal change, signed himself "E.E. the legal change, signed himself Cummings." Cummings' celebrated lower-case "i" and "you" frequently became upper-case in "We" and "Us," and it was the poet's way of putting aside his advocacy of individualism to acclaim the power of love, according to Forrest.

"People who are deeply in love do things which are sort of crazy," be said. "People have a lot of trouble loving. Some say they could get burt by giving their feelings to an-other and they could argue themselves out of it. There is a merica of corresponding is a low it. There is a merging of personalities in love, and cummings has done a great deal in trying to solve this problem poetically." One example is this:

lady will you come with me into the extremely little house of my mind. Clocks strike. The moon's round, through the window as you see and really i have no servants. We could almost live at the top of these stairs, there's a free room. We almost could gol you and all the clocks would run down the next day.

Forrest was asked about cummings's reputation for being anti-science.

"He hated jackhammers, noise, radios, technology," Forrest replied. "But he once had himself psychoanalyzed, and if he was sick, he went to the doctor. He did his own job as a poet. He talked abont our personbood, our emotions, our relations to our emotions, and as a guide tn these things, cummings was not bad.

"He told us that, yes, there is such a thing as science in the world, but when it comes to you and me and love and us, you can chuck science.

Attendance by a traveling troupe of British actors at a western barbecue in their bonor in Cedar City, Utah, reminded Jeremy Irons of how things must have been in Shakespeare's time. "I thnught in Elizabethan England the same thing would have happened to a group of traveling ac-tors," said Irons, in Cedar City to play scenes from Shakespeare for a BBC production entitled "All the World's a Stage." The production, written and presented by Ronald Harwood, is a television history of the theater in 13 parts. The producer, Peter Wineman, said the company chose the Adams Memorial Theater at Southern Utah State College because it was only open-air Elizabethan-style theater of its kind in the world. "We have nothing like it in England," said Panil Broase who class the short Paul Rogers, who plays the ghost to Irons' Hamlet. Irons is known to U.S. viewers of public television for his work in "The Pallisers," as Franz Liszt in "Notorious Woman" and in "Love For Lydia."
